Fund For Needy Students To Be Collected

Elections were held yesterday for the permanent positions of president and secretary-treasurer of the class of R. V. C. '33. Marjorie Lynch was elected president of her class, which position she will hold for life. Jean Anglin was elected to hold the permanent position of secretary-treasurer.

The honors of valedictorian fell to Jessie MacLeod, while Marjorie Gowans was elected class prophet, and Anne Barnes as class historian.

A gift committee was chosen to select a gift from this year's graduating class of girls, but a motion was brought forward and unanimously passed that money be collected to raise a fund for needy students. Last year, the graduating class of Royal Victoria College started this fund by collecting a sum from each girl. This year, the fund is to be enlarged, and it is hoped that as much money as possible will be raised.

Internationalist To Visit McGill Again Early This Month

NEXT Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday Dr. Walter Kotschnig, of Geneva, the General Secretary of the International Student Service, will be a visitor at McGill. Dr. Kotschnig is a well known international figure and is well informed on student affairs in Europe and other countries, having been decorated by several European nations in recognition of his services to students and in the cause of Internationalism.

Several meetings of a diverse nature are being planned in order to offer an opportunity to all to come in contact with Dr. Kotschnig while he will be at McGill next week. He is being booked up for as many occasions at the University as possible, as he is greatly sought after as a speaker. This is not the first visit which Dr. Kotschnig will have made to this University as he was here in 1929, 1930 and 1932, at which times he proved to be most popular among the students.

Philosophic Club Discusses Need For New Ethos

M. Bloomfield Introduced Subject In Strathcona Hall Last Night

THE final discussion on the Subject of Ethics took place last night at the meeting of the Philosophical Society in Strathcona Hall. There has been a series on this phase of philosophy, which has occupied the club for the past few meetings. The discussion last night centred around the position of humanism in the building of an ethos. There was considerable dispute about the definition of the term, humanism.

MORTON BLOOMFIELD, vice-president of the Club, introduced the topic, by presenting a proposition for a new system of ethics based on man, admitting however that his plan was impractical. He suggested that the two guiding principles of man are reason and will. The life of man is based mainly on will, and most of his actions are prompted by it.

A REASONABLE ethic cannot be built upon will however, as the course of history testifies. Reason cannot be the basis of an ethos at present, because its function is definitely limited by man's constitution. An excellent plan would be to change man's nature, by education and eugenics. This

Taoist Papacy And Religion Discussed

Professor Kiang Speaks At Hung Tao Society Meeting

That Taoism could expect no very great future, was the viewpoint expressed by Professor Kiang Kang-Hu, at a meeting of the Hung Tao Society, held last night in the Common Room of R. V. C. His subject was "The Taoist Religion and Its Papacy."

Dr. Kiang traced the growth of the movement, stating that its original founder, Lao Tzu, had no real intention of founding a new religion. The Taoist Papacy was founded by Chong Tao Ling, who was born in 34 A.D. At the age of 50, he retired to the Dragon-Tiger Mountain, and there founded the Papal community, where he lived till the age of 123. He was revered as a divine teacher, and thus founded

American Influence On Canada Greater Than Great Britain

R. W. Beckett And Max Ford Represent McGill At Toronto

AFFIRMATIVE WINS

Local Speakers Take Opposite Sides in Hart House Debate

Toronto, March 2. — (CP) — By a vote of 114 to 67 the affirmative was upheld at the Hart House debate last evening on the question "That in the opinion of this House Ottawa is nearer to Washington than to London." The debate was featured by the presence of two McGill speakers, R. W. Beckett and W. M. Ford, who spoke on opposite sides of the paper.

"The question must be considered strictly on its merits, whether for good or evil American influence outweighs the British," stated J. R. Anderson member from Trinity College, in opening the debate. Federalism, political parties, economic structure, cultural influences were the main points advanced by him.

"There has never been the co-operation of the United States which exists between Canada and Great Britain," opened R. W. Beckett for the negative. "The British North America Act, our common allegiance, the Privy Council link us indisputably to England." "Flag waving will not fill man's stomach," replied W. M. Ford in pointing out the similarity between Canada and her neighbor. Culture, the anomaly of the Imperial Conference, American wit and propaganda were shown to have their effect on our Canadian life.

The entire constitutional similarity of the English and Canadian systems as differing from the American was the main argument of R. W. Beckett of University College, the last speaker on the paper. Nearly a score of speakers from the floor carried the debate to great lengths. The waving of a large Union Jack was used as a cog in the negative's defence.

English History Is Topic Of Address

Prof. Adair Shows Effects of Changes in Seventeenth Century

The importance of the seventeenth century in the history of England consists in the spectacular execution of Charles I. not in the struggle between Royalty and Puritan while importance consists in the awakening of scientific thought. To show this was the object of Professor E. R. Adair's address delivered at the Mechanics Institute last night.

In the seventeenth century we see the beginning of modernity in every phase of life. We see the substitution of intellectual reasoning for blind faith in authority. Pure and applied science is revolutionized; agriculture is vastly improved; industry, architecture, and religion are all remodelled.

This is not the result of chance or haphazard efforts but of a new, clear, consistent thinking in which Francis Bacon led the way it was pointed out. In physics Sir Isaac Newton lays the foundation for future thought; in chemistry marvelous advances are made by Boyle and others. A new agriculture replaces the clumsy medieval methods. The very changes in the design of architecture in the seventeenth century show a new trend of thought. The church is no longer built to lead, as it were to the priest and choir but to the preacher showing that even religion has turned from appeal to the emotion to appeal to reason and thinking.

Gagnon Speaks On Both French And English Writings

Paper On Reciprocal Influence Read To English Literature Society

THE really first rate writers are those who may receive an influence from the other side, but keep to their main fundamental principles and continue to treat their subjects objectively or subjectively," was the opinion of Maurice Gagnon in his paper on "The Reciprocal Influence of French and English Contemporary Fiction," which he read before the English Literature Society last evening.

On the other hand there is the second class, with people like Maupassant and Arien who try to assimilate two cultures and use them to good effect. However, the first class so far has been much more successful in producing work much more powerful as well as much more durable. The benefit of such reciprocal influence may lie in broader views and greater understanding, but will affect adversely, if too great, the powers, the singleness of purpose and the passion

Undergrads Supper To Be Held Tonight

Union Ballroom Meeting Place Before Hockey Game

Before the Royals-McGill clash tonight the Arts Undergrads will meet in the Union Ballroom. When the Red Shirts go into the final game facing a three goal deficit, they will have a powerful delegation of Bill Gentlemen's cohorts to back them in their uphill battle. The Arts Undergrads are getting together for a buffet supper. The executive has made arrangements so that the classicists and some male friends may, for the small sum of twenty-five cents, eat and swell their gills with cake and coffee.

Owing to the fact that this will be a Faculty and not a Class gathering it will be impossible to have tables and service.

Entertainment, of course, will be of a very high standard. Twenty Fresh-

To Stage "Peter Pan"

English Department To Present Play Tomorrow Night

Sir James Barrie's famous play "Peter Pan" will be presented on Saturday by the English Department in co-operation with the Department of Extra-Mural Relations.

Subsequent performances of "Peter Pan" will take place each Saturday afternoon until March 25th. Tickets at 50 cents each may be obtained from the Comptroller's Office or from Bill Gentlemen.

Bob Freeman And Bruce Ross To Be Presented With Clocks

An added attraction to the regular Revue show at the Friday night performance next week will be the presentation of prizes to Bob Freeman and Bruce Ross, the winners of the recent Song Contest. Their songs were chosen out of a number of entries, as official McGill songs.

As Bob Freeman is taking an active part in this year's Revue, and as Bruce Ross is a former Producer, a great deal of "local colour" will be added to the presentation of the prizes, which are mantle clocks. Ross' march incidentally, is an adaptation of a song which was featured in the Revue of '31.

Wednesday Students' Night

As Wednesday night, the first performance, is students' night, and as the prices are correspondingly reduced to fit the pockets of the audience, seats for this performance are at a premium. Tickets are going well, and it is expected that there will be very little trouble in disposing of the rest.

The costumes for the chorus, which will be original in the extreme, are almost finished, as are the properties. The campus statue is practicing daily, and it is expected that it will be ready to do its share in the show. The public relations department are also doing efficient work, and posters are being distributed about the city, from St. James Street to Bernard, and from Papineau Street to Montreal West.

Debating Competition For Shields Resumes

Arts Semi-Finals To Take Place Monday

In order to revive the annual debating competition for the shield which was started in 1928 and which, since that year has not been continued, the executive of the Arts Interclass Debating Society are making an effort to foster Arts Undergraduates debating. And so, as a result of this effort they have arranged two debates, to take place this Monday, in Room 20 of the Arts Building.

The subject of the first debate, third year taking the affirmative and fourth taking the negative, is "Resolved that the Dominion of Canada should follow Great Britain in any support Great Britain may give Japan in the Sino-Japanese situation."

The second, between Arts I and II, upholding the affirmative and negative sides respectively is: "Resolved that in Canadian Universities professional education has unfortunately been allowed to overshadow education in Arts and the Pure Sciences."

All interested are invited to attend.

United States Must Abolish War Debts Of Other Countries

America's Lack of Co-operation in Removal of Depression Flayed

WEIGHTY QUESTION

Stein and Heiber Deliver Papers at Political Economy Meeting

The relentless policy of economic nationalism pursued by the United States and her unwillingness to co-operate with other nations in the restoration of normal conditions by the abolition of war debts were flayed last night at the meeting of the Political Economy Club when Sam Stein and S. P. Heiber delivered papers on "The Revision of Peace Settlement and the Burden of Debt."

Stein's paper was mostly a brief survey of the War Debt and Reparations question and gave a number of facts and figures. Following the War, the United States and Britain were the great creditor nations. The Dawes and Young Plans specifically fixed the amount and time in which Germany was to pay her reparations. In July 1932, the final settlement on this question was made at the Lausanne Conference. This Conference reduced Germany's Reparations payments almost 99 per cent pending a satisfactory agreement concerning War Debts. The Reparation settlement being thus linked with the War Debt Problem the speaker proceeded to this side of the question.

States Creditor

During the War the United States lent out 10 billions of dollars to the other nations — that is, established credits in the Federal Reserve Bank to their names. This with accrued interest reached the figure of 11 billions. Britain was likewise a creditor nation. Britain early realized the evil of the War Debts and in 1922 Balfour issued a declaration intended mainly for the United States' observation, that Brit-

McGill To Oppose Vermont Debaters

McGill is upholding the affirmative side of the argument and is represented by Beatrice Klineberg and Evelyn Elkin. The former is in her third year Arts and is a member of the Delta Sigma Executive, and also of the Societa Francese. Self-reliance

IF it were possible to select one quality to which might be attributed the success of the world's greatest men in every field of endeavor that one quality would probably be Self-reliance. To this essential attribute may be credited the victories of Napoleon and Washington, the success of Burke and Hamilton, the fortunes of the Rothschilds and Carnegie, the scientific discoveries of Newton, Dalton and Faraday, and the marvelous surgical feats of the Mayo brothers.

Self-reliance is of necessity accompanied by ability, energy, knowledge and honor, for its foundation rests on the discovery, by careful introspection and self-analysis, of the possession of those requisites by which are measured the power of a man. Self-reliance, in men who are great in the true sense of the word, is absolutely free from bigotry. Even a superficial study of the lives of some of the world's most famous characters is sufficient to convince one that in their cases it was generously adulterated with faith in their fellow men.

In a larger sense all that is new and progressive is the result of self-reliance. Every thought and action is influenced by this great magnetizing force. The boldest advances of scientific enterprise, the most utile inventions, the most rapid strides of literature and art owe their incipience and introduction to it.

Self-reliance is the hope of the state, the nation and the civilized world. The vigor and vitality of a people are affected by it.

Self-reliance is found the means for a quick adaptation to the practical affairs of life. It is cumulative, but finds its greatest development in the formative period of life. There is probably no greater opportunity for its cultivation than in the various activities of University life, where every advantage is offered for the exercise of talent and accomplishment.

Finally, in a broad sense, self-reliance is perseverance and with its powerful aid there is realized the classic advice of Richelieu to Francois Villon. "In the bright lexicon of youth, which the gods adore, there is no such word as fail."

Easy Money

THE lure of easy money seems to permeate through all classes of society from the investors in the famous "Drake Estate" to the speculators in the stock market, and in so doing it necessarily has a great influence on society. It is the human incentive to "get-rich-quick" that leads to wild speculation and which fosters stock swindles, bank robberies, graft, and rackets of every description; and which makes sweepstakes, betting and all games of chance forever popular.

It seems, therefore, that one of the great troubles with our present day society and one of the causes of our economic disorders is the fact that we judge people to far too great an extent by what they possess rather than by what they are and what they do. Wealth has been placed above almost all other attributes and those who possess it have frequently been placed on a pedestal. Many of these are inspiring "kings" of industry, finance or commerce have recently been shown up as unscrupulous villains. Many of the greatest contributors to the welfare of the human race died penniless, on the other hand, receiving none of the recognition due them.

A desire to work, to make a name for oneself or to make some contribution to mankind seems therefore to be submerged by this widespread desire to obtain easy money and the high respect which is wont to go with it.

The moderate popularity of the "pocket-book" racket introduced on the campus some time ago was adequate proof that a desire for easy money extends to the University. It is indeed strange to note that it is not generally realized that what one gains in one of the contests, "pools," or bets, someone else is bound to lose. Such practices are the influences of a speculative age and; though not particularly harmful, they are certainly not commendable.

Once we decide to be somebody and do something rather than to possess something there is certain to be more progress shown and more widespread harmony in the world about us.

THE THEATRE

David Garrick

HISTORY the novel and the drama have all combined to give the world vividly colored and romantic pictures of much of the life of the past centuries. In this category can be included "David Garrick" a play by Thomas W. Robertson, having as its motif an imagined incident in the life of that great eighteenth century actor, and written in a style which if somewhat antiquated, is nonetheless highly amusing, offering at the same time much scope for clever and efficient acting.

Many fanciful stories have been created about the heroes of past days, some of which have assumed the intensity of a legend, while most of them have tended to show the greatness and particular abilities of the man in question. "David Garrick" is of such a calibre. What would a famous actor be more likely to do than to undergo in his real life a part he has played perhaps often upon the boards? Another clown who must laugh to please the people who paid to see him laugh, but whose gaiety is choked with his personal sorrow.

Thomas Robertson, a nineteenth century playwright, has written a play that shows a keen understanding of dramatic requirements, but which is beset by many conventions, chiefly of humor and of feminine conduct, that are definitely associated with his own time, but which when presented in all seriousness before a modern audience appears ridiculous, and incite unintended reactions. The best lines in the play are those quoted directly from Shakespeare; on the other hand much inconsequential banter occupies some of the acts, the first, in particular, which adds stress to the work of the characters.

The presentation of this play last night by the English Department deserves as much praise as has been lavished upon the Department's past few productions. The acting was straightforward, and the settings most colorful. If the tempo of the production was somewhat laggardly at first, it picked up speed, and was finished off with excellent despatch. The costumes were most appropriate, and lent an atmosphere to the play that was most harmonious to the ideas generally entertained about the eighteenth century.

David Garrick, the only character of the play who has a historical counterpart, was played to perfection by James Harvey. The complicated job of acting the actor as an actor and as an everyday man was disposed of most successfully by his very facile manner, that was always responsive to the other characters on the stage with him, and which showed itself up most markedly in the lighter moments of his part. A very close second was J. Winston Kerr in the part of Squire Richard Olvry; the boisterousness that was given this role was hardly overdone; it contained a freshness and spirit that might have introduced itself upon some of the other characters without any ill effects.

Ada Ingot, the girl of Garrick's heart—in this play—was played somewhat ineffectively by Kathryn Stanley. Her main weakness was to appear as if she were reciting her lines out of a prompt copy, suffering thereby, especially when contrasted with Jim Harvey's excellently modulated phrases. Her carriage and movement were not without grace, however, while her effective costumes were borne with ease. M. A. Wilder as Ada's father did not look very convincing as such, a fault of the make-up department, and his tendency to overact did not enhance his part in the first act very materially.

The remainder of the cast was efficient to the last man, and he, Donald Burns, was more than that. His pantomime as the stutterer was most hilarious, and was the most successful comedy of the evening. A few bits of dialect were not always quite true. Reta McDonald as Mrs. Smith used some Lancashire and London twists in the same sentence, while Garrick himself used such terms as "guy" and "spread" which sound more like modern Americanisms than mid-eighteenth century English.

This play served as excellent entertainment, and in addition it gave the audience an insight not only into nineteenth century play writing, but also into the types of audiences which Garrick and his contemporaries had to face, and into the regard with which the actor's profession was held at the time. This is experimental drama in its best laboratory. —Atchett.

THE THEATRES PRESENT

Princess Theatre

COMMENCING Saturday and for one week only, the programme at the Princess theatre promises to be one of the most attractive ones that has been given this season. As usual two special features will be presented. The main feature being "Child of Manhattan" featuring Nancy Carroll and John Boles, while the added attraction "Obey the Law" will feature Leo Carrillo and Lois Wilson.

The story of "Child of Manhattan" tells the story of a pretty little taxi-dancer who marries a handsome young millionaire and after a brief period of happiness decides upon a Mexican divorce to give him back his name because she believes he gave it to her in the first place simply because he considered it the gentlemanly thing to do.

Nancy Carroll will be seen as the little taxi-dancer, and John Boles will portray the role of the Park Avenue millionaire. Others in the cast will include such well known dramatic and character players as Charles (Buck) Jones, Warburton Gamble, Clara Blandick, Jane Darwell, Luis Alberni and Jessie Ralph.

"Obey the Law" with Leo Carrillo, Dickie Moore and Lois Wilson will be the added attraction. The story brings Carrillo to the screen in another of his perfect dialect performances as an Italian immigrant who becomes innocently involved in the crooked ward politics of New York's East Side.

Ben Stollert directed the production which includes Henry Olive, Eddie Carr, Cino Corrado and Mary McLaren in the supporting cast.

Palace Theatre

JANET GAYNOR, the darling of the screen, heads a brilliant star cast, including Will Rogers, Lew Ayres, Sally Eilers and Louise Dresser in "State Fair" the feature at the Palace starting tomorrow "State Fair" adapted to the screen from the literary Guild novel by Phil Stong is one of the year's most notable productions. It is a fresh and delightful bit of screen entertainment that is moulded to suit youth in its romantic episodes and to be thoroughly appealing to the older generation in its abundant homey, domestic situations.

All of the charm, and realism of the book have been enchaned in the screen version, and the intriguing characters of the novel are made to live and breathe by the stars of the picture. Rich in romance and comedy, the story deals with the loves and adventures of a middle western farm family. Abel Frake, his wife, his daughter and son go to the "State Fair." There the children become involved in romances while the parents are competing for prizes.

Janet Gaynor is seen as a demure and lovely farm girl who learned about love from a fascinating young newspaper reporter. It is her most appealing role since "Till Heaven." Will Rogers plays the part of her father, his most brilliant characterization. Lew Ayres, Sally Eilers, Norman Foster, Louise Dresser, Frank Craven and Victor Jory are also ideally cast.

Delightful short screen subjects will also be shown.

Capitol Theatre

THE mazes of San Francisco's Chinatown, its plots, intrigues, and long battles, and the romance of a Chinese girl who sells herself at auction to aid her countrymen, furnish the dramatic background of "The Son-Daughter," Helen Hayes and Ramon Novarro are teamed in "Son-Daughter," at the Capitol Theatre today. The second feature is Douglas Fairbanks Jr. in "Parachute Jumper."

"Son-Daughter" based on David Belasco's famous stage play, is a colorful and spectacular expose of the inner workings of Chinatown and the struggle that existed between royalists and revolutionists. Gorgeous celebrations, great gambling dens and romance are contrasted with the intrigues of grim hatchetmen in the secret catacombs of the Oriental quarter.

The second feature Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. in "Parachute Jumper," sparkles with the lively humor of Rian James, noted New York columnist. The story opens in the jungles of Nicaragua where two dare-devil pilots of the U. S. Marine Corps capture a whole band of bandits after having been shot down while cruising in the air. It follows their adventurous career to New York City, where after nearly starving to death, they are innocently entangled in a scheme to smuggle contraband by air from Canada.

There are also several amusing sequences, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. gives one of his best performances and is ably supported by Bette Davis, Leo Carrillo and Frank McHugh.

Loew's Theatre

FOR eleven months the mystery comedy "Whistling in the Dark" amused followers of the Broadway stage. Now screen goers have an opportunity of observing the antics of Ernest Truax, star of the original play, and that clever comedienne, Una Merkel, in the riotous talking version which opens at Loew's theatre tomorrow. Bob Murphy and Hal Sherman are the double headliners of an excellent vaudeville bill.

"Whistling in the Dark" brings Truax, as an author of best selling mystery novels, and his fiancée, Miss Merkel, into the layer of a band of law-breakers who are fighting for the control of the brewing business after it has become legal. When Truax boasts how, in his stories, he devises the "perfect crime," they insist that he plan one for them.

How he plans this crime, only to learn that the gang are going to wipe both himself and the girl out, and then sets about saving the intended victim, who is hundreds of miles away aboard a speeding train, provides the material for the suspense and laughter of the story.

The double headline vaudeville programme brings back the ever popular Bob Murphy, the prince of humor, and Hal Sherman, eccentric comedy stepper. "A Miniature Musical Comedy" featuring Miss Sharon De Vries and her Six Stylish Steppers, The Forum Boys who present a "Light Rhapsody in Tan" and the Great Johnson, the Billant entertainer round out an excellent vaudeville programme.

A musical and short screen subjects will also be offered.

Correspondence

Prices and Tickets

The Editor,
McGill Daily.

Dear Sir:

Would some kind member of the Revue Executive please inform me why the price for Students' Night of this year's Red & White Revue has been raised from 55 cents to 85 cents? This action is decidedly contrary to the contention of the Daily that prices are lower this year. The main support for the show is derived from the students, who are not anxious to pay the excessive price of 85 cents for a dress-rehearsal. If the answer is that the Executive has raised the prices in order to balance an increased budget, then I say that it is deplorable that with times as they are, more money should be spent on the show when greater economy should prevail, and the students thus be forced to spend more to see the production, or in many cases forgo seeing it at all. As a matter of fact the higher prices will tend to prevent the balancing of this budget in that they will lead to a decrease in ticket sales.

Another question is—Why the elimination of Graduates' Night? I am certain that the practice in the past of setting aside one night for Graduates only has attracted many of the graduates to attend as a sort of reunion than if there were no such provision. It seems to me that this is bound to cut down on subscriptions from graduates.

Hoping that the Revue Executive will take note of these facts, and thanking you for your valuable space, I remain,

Yours truly,

—Spectator.

United States Must Abolish War Debts Of Other Countries

ain would abolish all her debts exceeding her debt to the States.

Then, continued the speaker, the depression set in and the debtor nations found it impossible to make payments. This led to Hoover's moratorium for one year from July 1st, 1931. The States have further rendered the payment of debts impossible by imposing high tariff walls thus preventing the payment in goods. Everything, pointed the speaker, necessitates the abolition of War Debts.

France Slow
S. P. Heiber in the second paper gave a more general survey of the situation. France, he said, because of a variety of reasons was much slower to see light than England and it was not until 1931 that she realized the impossibility of paying the War Debts.

The War Debt question in the States is too closely allied with political forces and Heiber stated that the political element should be removed for a clear understanding on the part of the American people in the question. The States should see that the debt question has greater consequences on the rest of the world than on her own people.

Payments Difficult

In this respect the coming World Conference should do much to rectify the situation as it has been stated that the War Debt question will be thoroughly threshed out. There is a vast difference, stated the speaker, between the mechanism of domestic and foreign exchange. Dumping has not been successful. Hence, stated the speaker, all eyes are turned towards the States as holding in her hands the solution to the recovery.

Taoist Papacy And Religion Discussed

the Taoist Papacy. Unlike the Catholic Papacy, this title is inherited, the present holder being the 63rd possessor of that title. Dr. Kiang is personally acquainted with this individual.

Papal Community
The Papal Community on Dragon-Tiger Mountain has an organized system of government. At the head is the Pope, under whom there are four lieutenants. Under these there are twelve officials, and under these twelve there are 28 subordinates. This community represents a little kingdom all by itself.

Taoism is founded on the basic principles of the Taoist philosophy. It also incorporates the social ideas of the average Chinese, and includes the principles of Confucius, and borrowings from Buddhism. Alchemy, and a belief in spirits also forms a major element in the Taoist religion, while mental hygiene forms a large portion of Taoist religious classics. Dr. Kiang concluded by remarking that although he saw no rosy future for Taoism, he hoped that Taoist classics would be studied and revised.

McGill Must Overcome Three Goal Deficit To Clinch Championship

Redmen Faced By Difficult Task at Forum Tonight

TONIGHT McGill's hockey team will have an opportunity to redeem itself for the defeat of Wednesday night before the year's largest crowd, when Bobby Bell's Redmen went down before the fast-travelling Royals by a 3-0 count. The odds for a victory tonight are heavy against McGill, and there are few hockey fans in Montreal who concede the Red team the slightest chance to overcome the 3-goal deficit.

Victory Improbable

That Bobby Bell's puckchasers are capable of playing better hockey than they did on Wednesday night is an undisputed fact; that they can do it tonight is a matter of conjecture. After the poor exhibition of the first game, it will require a tremendous reversal of form by the Redmen, if they are to overcome the three goal deficit.

Royals are at present playing the best hockey they have displayed this year, and it will require no small effort on McGill's part to amass sufficient goals to defeat Penniston's pack. Royals could do nothing wrong on Wednesday night, every one on their roster turning in a fine performance. Ralph St. Germain took time out from nursing a grudge against his former teammates, and played heads-up hockey, displaying rare strategy throughout in feeding his forwards, besides skating faster than he has all season. Neville, McKenzie, Delaney, and MacQuisten turned in splendid efforts, the last-named showing marked improvement. Coulter, of course, played a fine game and fully deserved his shut-out.

Not Too Late

There is no doubt that the all-star aggregation that failed to function at the beginning of the season, had at last found its stride, and will endeavor not only to sustain their lead, but also to add to their margin. It is not, however, too late for McGill to overtake them, thus living up to their reputation of playing best when at a disadvantage. The men have, no doubt, learned that penalties are not conducive to hockey victories, particularly against opponents who refuse to swallow the bait. Jack McGill led the league in scoring honours and his services are surely more valuable on the ice than in the pen. Frayed tempers are common occurrence at hockey games, but Red teams have usually confined their physical propensities strictly to playing hockey. Wednesday night, however, saw a scene enacted on Forum ice that has certainly established a precedent for McGill hockey games.

Beyond a doubt, the majority of the Redmen were very much off form on Wednesday night. Kenny Farmer tried hard, but was unable to attain his former heights. If Farmer can do half as well against Royals tonight as he did against M.A.A.A. in the playoff of 1931, McGill still have a chance to capture the Senior Group crown. Gordie Crutchfield and Farquharson were the only two of the forwards who performed capably. Nels Crutchfield's play towards the latter part of the game savoured of his usual brilliant displays, but the early moments saw him slipping up on many opportunities. His great difficulty appeared to be in holding on to the puck. The defence performed as well as could be expected, the back-checking on the part of the forwards being none too good. If it weren't for Powers the Royals would now be boasting a 10-goal lead, instead of a mere 3-goal advantage. If McGill can regain their mid-season form, Royals may be on the receiving end of a severe shock.

Presbyterians Win Final Cage Fixture By Large Margin

In the final game of the inter-collegiate basketball schedule last night the Presbyterians came out of a losing streak to beat the United College 25-11. The game was fast from the opening whistle, the Presbyterians getting away to a good start, and holding their lead throughout. Sharkey and Nugent accounted for most of the winners' baskets, while Dangerfield was the mainstay of the losers.

The latter were handicapped by the fact that Mitchell, who has just recovered from a three weeks illness, was unable to turn in his usual game. The league is now deadlocked in a three-cornered tie, and play-offs will be held Tuesday and Thursday nights.

The line-ups were as follows:—Pres.—Nugent, Sharkey, MacMillan, White, MacNeil, Sutherland, MacQuisten, Lamond. United.—Dangerfield, Woodmark, Foggo, MacKenzie, Bergeron, W. Bergeron, A. McIlroy, Mitchell.

Brilliant Redman

JACK MCGILL who will be one of McGill's most important scoring threats in tonight's second playoff game. This husky forward has been showing a sterling brand of hockey this year and led the high scorers in the Senior League's regular fixtures. He is one of the outstanding players in the loop.

Varsity Hoopsters Prepared To Fight Hard Against Reds

TORONTO, March 2.—(C.I.S.P.)

—Despite the fact that the U. of T. Senior cagers were eliminated last Saturday night from all hope of an intercollegiate title due to a one point loss to Western, a full strength team will meet the Redmen determined to avenge the defeat that McGill inflicted when these two teams last met. Ian Allison who has been out of recent competition with illness will probably be occupying his position at right forward teamed up with Hal Collins.

Collins has improved beyond recognition in his last three games and will bear some careful watching. Caplan who alternates with Ford at the centre position will be the likely starter and sure to be in action most of the time. These three men have largely been responsible for Varsity's place as winner of the Big Five championship and at present the team is tied for first place with St. Michael's for first place, of the Toronto group of the O.B.A.

The teams have won a game a piece and will play off on Friday night. The McGill game will be their fifth in nine days. Guarding the locals' hoop will be Slideman and Wood, the former being high scorer of the intercollegiate series. Other players who will make the trip are Gold and Wagman. As the basketball title is likely to rest with McGill this year the U. of T. aggregation is out to defeat them to redeem their intercollegiate position and show their superiority although they will likely be tired after their strenuous schedule.

Should Varsity win in the O.B.A. playoffs it is unknown whether or not they will continue any further due to the pressure of exams. As their record now stands they have defeated both Queen's and Western once and in turn have been defeated by these teams in their home games.

ROWING

By "Len" Johnston

(Past president of The Lachine Rowing Club and Coach)

THE great amateur sport of rowing was organized in this part of Canada in 1863, when the Lachine Boating Club was founded, and has continued successfully ever since, the Ottawa, Grand Trunk, and Brockville clubs being formed in succeeding years. The latest to enter the sport is the McGill Rowing Club, founded in 1925. All these clubs are members of the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen, and compete in their annual regatta at St. Catharines, widely known as the Canadian Henley.

In 1920, Lachine, Ottawa and Brockville formed the Eastern Rowing Association, which McGill joined in 1926. This organization holds annual regattas in turn in the three cities, non-member clubs being invited to enter open events.

In the East, the Ottawa Rowing Club was the first to go into eight oared racing, Lachine following their example in 1909, and Brockville and McGill later. All have been successful in this commanding and spectacular sport at one time or another. Ottawa having held the Canadian and American heavyweight eights and fours championships; Lachine, the 140 and 150 pound Canadian and American honors, and McGill University has held the Canadian 140 pound senior and 150 pound junior eights, as well as many titles in fours.

The three older Eastern Clubs have developed scullers from time to time, but have not yet been successful in winning the senior championship. The East's outstanding win in the single sculls being Charley Starke's victory in the Association Singles at the Canadian Henley in 1931 in his first year sculling.

The cost of single shells is a great handicap to most aspirants who would otherwise go in for single and double sculling, as all racing shells and equipment must be imported.

Next July, the annual Eastern Regatta will be held at Ottawa, and will no doubt bring out many new prospects to uphold the dignity and competitive spirit of oarsmen in this part of Canada.

In conclusion, I would mention the outstanding fact in connection with eight oared boat racing, that in the final race for the Olympic championship at Los Angeles four great crews representing countries as widely separated as England, Italy, United States and Canada with widely differing ideas of coaching and training, should finish within one shell length of each other after 2000 metres, showing the high development of this great international sport.

Medicine 2 Takes Denton To Jump Inter-Class Title In Lucerne Meet

Shuster And Monahan Lead Doctors To Cage Victory

The class basketball league is at last ended and Medicine II are the new champions by virtue of their handy 35-31 victory over the fast Med. III quintette. The second year doctors, who went through the season with only one defeat, that in the hands of Arts I, who were put out of the running by Med. III showed a marked superiority throughout a fast and closely fought tilt.

Shuster and Monahan were the stars and high scorers of the winning team, while Seltzer and Garcelon were best for the losers. In the beginning of the first frame the senior saw-bones looked like winners and ran up a good lead, but the champs put on a scoring spree and the count at the turn was 17-16 in their favour. They kept up the good work and from then on their lead was never threatened.

Shuster High Scorer

Led by Shuster, who was high scorer of the game with 11 points to his credit, and Monahan, who ran up 10 points for Med II showed real championship form. The losers, however, put up a hard fight and were a constant threat with Margolic, Garcelon and Seltzer particularly dangerous.

The teams were as follows:—Medicine II (35)—White (3), Shuster (11), Monahan (10), Olker (2), Donahew (5), Young (4), Dolfini.

Medicine III (31)—Garcelon (4), Whitcomb (0), Webber (6), Hursh (7), Creighton (0), Margolic (5), Aronovitch (0), Seltzer (9).

Western To Meet McGill At London In Basketball Tilt

LONDON, Ont., March 2.—(C.I.S.P.)—Tonight McGill's Redmen meet the Mustang seniors in what should prove to be this season's outstanding cage attraction and every basketball fan should be on hand to cheer the Western boys along.

There is no doubting the fact that the Redshirts are the most colorful aggregation in the league, and one of the best teams in the country.

Every man is a real scoring threat, which statement is proven by the fact that in last week's game, with Queen's, every McGill man chalked up points on the score-board, with Don Small, fast forward, leading with 17 points. In Don Young, centre and outstanding football star, and Reed Lewin, McGill have two brilliant players that are pretty to watch. Young, in particular, being our favorite headache when he starts to go to work.

Lee and Hammond, football luminaries are capable alternates. Rice and Calhoun, veteran guards, form a combination that is hard to score on and the purple forwards will have to be at their best to run up much of a score on this pair.

As for the Mustangs, every man is primed for the season's greatest effort. This game will probably mark the last appearance in Inter-Collegiate competition for Hater, Monro, and Gunn, and they are bound to make things interesting from the start.

Hogan and Cherniak have also hit their stride and a semblance of team play seems to be creeping into the purple's game. White-well, Zavits and Clarke will be there to toss in a few; we will likely

Redmen Have Already Annexed Basketball Championship

ALTHOUGH McGill's big basketball team has already clinched its third straight court championship, they have no intention of coasting in their two remaining intercollegiate games. Tonight Western plays host to Coach Van Wagner's crew, and tomorrow evening the red-shirted squad will grace the floor of Varsity's Hart House. Although these are the final games of the Redmen's intercollegiate curriculum, they will be playing in deadly earnest, the primary reason being that should both the matches end in McGill's favor, they will have completed three consecutive seasons of Canadian college competition without one defeat.

This same Red team has in the past five years compiled one of the finest records of any basketball squad of major Canadian calibre. In intercollegiate circles, counting six games which they play annually against Queen's, Toronto and Western, they have in the past five seasons lost only four games out of 28, with the two above-mentioned tilts still to be played to complete their fifth year. All their four defeats came in the first two of these seasons, when they lost two games in each one.

Imposing Record

Consequently, their record for the past three seasons has been even more imposing, since they have won, in that period, 16 matches and have not yet lost any. The men who have helped to compile this remarkable record have nearly all been with the team for the past five years. Don Young, generally acknowledged to be Canada's outstanding passing center, has combined with Mel Rice, Donny Small and Bob Calhoun to compose the nucleus of this remarkable aggregation. Faulkner, Hammond and Lewin are more recent acquisitions to the ranks.

In inter-city competition, the Redmen have also compiled a fine record. In their annual Dodd's Cup matches with the winning team of the Senior City League, they have won the trophy four out of the five years of its existence. Last year, Fusillers gave the Redmen a scare, but the collegians finally came out on top.

Point Average High

In the past three years of inter-collegiate competition, their scoring averages for each season show gradual gains. In the 1930-31 season, their average score per game was 33 points, while the following year showed an increase of three points per game. This season, the Redmen have a 40 points game average, demonstrating clearly their increased power and accuracy around the baskets. The points per game scored against them during the same period have fluctuated very slightly around the 24 point mark.

Coach Van Wagner is looking forward to no sinecure for his charges in their week-end games. Western are just as likely as not to have another good game left in their system, since they upset Varsity last week in London to insure the Redmen of their championship. Toronto has always been a particular sore spot for opposing McGill teams and Warren Steven's men will be trying hard to compensate their coach in his fruitless first year of basketball activity.

need them — both players and baskets.

in the Queen City. Squad Weakened
However, McGill won both the Western and Toronto games last year and they should repeat. George Faulkner was unable to leave last night with the team, being still bothered by his troublesome knee. Jim Wilson, of the second squad, has been recruited to take his place, while Oakland Ross, also of the second, is also a member of the party. He is going in place of Jerry Lee. The rest of the squad, of course, is intact, consisting of Young, Small, Lewin, Rice, Calhoun and Hammond.

Gagnon Speaks On Both French And English Writings

that only unity of thought and some one-sidedness can produce.

The chief asset of each writer is that he is either an Englishman or a Frenchman. Racial characteristics are never so marked as when made concrete by the writings in which we find originality of conception and execution. Dickens is intensely English, his work is entirely subjective, Balzac, on the other hand, is an objective writer, an individualist.

Mrs. Vaughan was among those present at the meeting and was very interested in the discussion which took place on the subject of the evening.

Montreal Aeroplane Club Holds Meeting

Colonel Bishop Lauds Aviation as Means of Transportation

"Flying is the ultimate means of quick transportation, and other methods cannot economically compete with it," claimed Colonel Bishop, guest speaker at the meeting of the Montreal Light Aeroplane Club in the Queen's Hotel last night. The speaker went on to say that once the club will be able to get members to join it will have accomplished the hardest part of its task.

This flying club movement is vital to the progress of aviation in Canada, and it is the soundest nucleus of large commercial force in the Dominion. Col. Bishop concluded by stating that the club should approach Ottawa for a charter, and engage a bi-lingual instructor in aviation.

Mr. Jacques Hebert, famous for his flight to Australia, described his experiences on the flight, and the progress of aviation clubs all over the world. Starting from Italy, and finishing at Sydney, Mr. Hebert told of the marvelous advance made in aviation. He concluded by stating that Montreal is hopelessly behind in this progress, and that something ought to be done to better this condition.

The plans of the club as described by the president are to continue activities, and to start a drive for members; the minimum of members is 100, and the fee is $20. The Club has decided that flying alone will not keep it together, and so have come to the conclusion to introduce tennis, golf, etc. The headquarters of the club will be at the Fairchild Club, and the Fairchild Inn will also be open for meals.

Society will be held in the Main Lecture Theatre of the Macdonald Chemistry and Mining Building today at 5.00 p.m. The speaker will be Dr. D. L. Thompson, and the subject, "Inorganic elements in the animal body." All interested are invited to attend.

Would Abolish Military Training

Minneapolis, Minn.—Opponents of compulsory military training at the University of Minnesota received additional encouragement last week when it was learned that a strong liberal leader in the state legislature would insist that a rider be attached to the appropriation bill withholding appropriations from state institutions supporting compulsory R.O.T.C. Such a rider would circumvent the law giving the board of regents full authority to rule on the matter.

An Italian physician has perfected an elixir of life consisting of solutions of gold, platinum, palladium, brain extract, iodine, formic acid, phosphorus, and a number of other ingredients, which it is claimed, will add ten years to the life of an old person.

Fear of a wave of communism sweeping over the country has resulted in the dismissal of more than 100 school teachers in Santiago, Chile, who are regarded as dangerous agitators. Editorials in newspapers throughout the country are blaming the schools for the communistic trend.

There are two kinds of education. One is that which makes you pass your examinations, the other is the one you enjoy. This makes education an atmosphere, a discipline and a lift, and produces a human being.—Bishop David of Liverpool.
